

FASTCAR: man of action is a 45-minute, comedic character show with audience participation.

The show has three main sections: the phone call, the date, the mission.

The opportunities for adventure that appear before him always excite the protagonist. The phone rings in the middle of the night, inviting a certain amount of flair and action to the answering, however, the phone turns out to be a formidable antagonist. In order to avert total failure Fastcar calls a woman in the audience. She is invited to join him for a dinner date later that night. Chicken will be served! Through mime, sound and rhythm the table is set and preparations made, all accompanied by disco groove. After falling for the lady, a lost ring necessitates a brave and challenging heist of a beautiful diamond. Again, it's all in the means. And again, some help from the public is appreciated. The new partners overcome real or invented obstacles in order to succeed in their mission.

A minimal set, at times a completely bare stage, leaves the audience room to imagine and create the space along with the clown.
