

The Magnificent Terrific Top-Notch Superb Show

Two people who call themselves Galexia and Gord are hap-hazardly attempting to perform in and host a variety show with some occasional help from the audience. They are doing their best, considering performance is not their forte. Both of them are barristas, normally. They are so driven to entertain the audience when suddenly a dog-like creature, Captain Jax, appears on their television screen. He mentions that Galexia and Gord must succeed at entertaining the audience if they really want to be turned into dogs. He also insists they practice their choreography. When the transmission ends, it is back to showtime for Gord and Galexia, as they struggle through more acts. Throughout the show, Captain Jax contacts them several times to encourage them and remind them of their goal: if this audience is entertained enough, then they will be willing to do whatever Captain Jax wants, including joining his intergalactic pack to rule the universe....or at least that's the way Captain Jax sees it. As the show progresses, Galexia and Gord discover they both have different views of what entertainment is, and those views eventually clash when Gord seemingly ruins Galexia's stand-up comedy bit. Luckily, Galexia learns to understand that Gord just wants the performance to be fun and they reconcile their differences. At that moment, Captain Jax calls the whole mission off. Galexia and Gord are devastated! This was supposed to be their big moment, their chance to do something extraordinary....but then they realize that it's better to focus on what you do have instead of what you don't: they still have an audience in front of them and a whole bunch of acts to perform. And now that Galexia can see performing as fun instead of work, the two of them have a great time performing the rest of the show. They generate enough positive energy to get Captain Jax's attention again and he decides that although this mission is over, Galexia and Gord might be of use to him in the future.