

BFFs Synopsis

Best friends Amanda and Devin reunite at an AirBnB in Montreal for a weekend of reconnecting.

They went to university together in Montreal, but ended up in different cities afterwards. Along the way they've gained jobs, relationships, gym memberships, skincare routines, insurance, and savings.

After cracking open a box of wine with red solo cups, they realize how quickly their easy breezy 20s has passed them by and how adulthood has snuck up on them. Yet somehow they're also nowhere near the benchmarks of "adulthood" they'd expected to be by now. For example - did you know that you're supposed to have double the amount of your annual salary in retirement savings by age 35?!

In a stroke of drunken genius, they realize that they need to Hakuna Matata and should ring in their 30th birthdays at Disneyworld. Dirty thirty with Mickey and Minnie? Yes please.

Now if only real life didn't have real responsibilities...

BFFs is a 60 minute original musical comedy by the award-winning Bad Dress Productions. Performances run from July 5-13 as part of the Toronto Fringe Festival.
