After the developmental production of the University of Toronto premiered to rave reviews calling it "smart, empowering, and relatable", Statistics has messages that appeal to audiences young and old. "Statistics successfully captures audiences with a heartfelt story while teaching this unfamiliar story of a female scientist changing the world" says Maddie Sekulin, who plays the role of Rose. "Too often are women's stories left unheard and forgotten" adds Rachel Mundy, playing the role of Rosalind. "I take great pride in giving a voice to Dr. Franklins life and scientific contributions."

Statistics is the winner of the 2019 Adams Prize for Musical Theatre. It received an Award of Merit for composition at the 2019 University of Toronto Drama Festival and was shortlisted for the Playwrights' Guild of Canada Emerging Playwright award.
