

Chronicles of a Black Woman: A Sketch Comedy is a one-woman animated digital stage play, starring Sandy Daley. Daley plays three different distinct characters in the play: an Afrocentric black woman, a Caribbean woman and a single mother. Sandy Daley draws upon her experiences as a Caribbean woman, a single mother and a prolific storyteller.

With humor, authenticity and real-life emotions, Daley highlights the raw feelings of black women as they navigate a modern society: fraught with systemic racism. Strong comedic moments, mixed with dramatic turns, will have you dying with laughter, as you wipe away your tears.

When we first meet Vivian, Monica and Pauline, they're all living their lives, the best possible way that they can. They meet once a month at the hair salon and this is their time to release and relax.

However, on this particular day, things take a dramatic turn as the topic of Black Lives Matter takes center stage. Through honest, authentic and sometimes confrontational conversations, all the ladies reach a clear resolution at the end. Chronicles of a Black Woman holds nothing back and holds no punches.
