

Meat Market Synopsis

Freshly graduated from their rural high school, Fagabond downloads gay hookup app Findr for the first time hoping to avoid being 'the weird virgin' in college. What follows is a series of raunchy, ridiculous, and revealing interactions with various app users, giving Fagabond a crash course in the archetypes of gay dating. Scamming sugar daddies, faceless profiles, straight girls looking for a GBF, and married men, Fagabond meets them all. However, it's not all bad, as Fagabond finds a mentor in an older trans person, and even begins an intimate relationship with a closeted boy from their high school. On the surface, our show is a brash comedy about gay stereotypes, but at its core this is a story about a young queer person finding the courage to be their authentic (trans) self in a world which seeks to erase them.
